

LARK QUARRY CONSERVATION PARK

Information from Aussietowns.com.au, photos from Bing.com

Located 110 km from Winton the Lark Quarry Conservation Park with its internationally famous Dinosaur Stampede is a unique insight into life in western Queensland some ninety-five million years ago. This is the largest group of footprints of running dinosaurs uncovered anywhere in the world. First discovered in the early 1960s it was completely excavated in 1976-77. Three species of dinosaur made the 1200 tracks - a large flesh eating carnosaur and many small coelurosaurs and ornithopods.

At the time Western Queensland was an inland sea edged by marshy, heavily vegetated plains teeming with dinosaurs of all shapes and sizes.

We know this because the fossilised remains found in places as far apart as Richmond, Hughenden and Winton offer a unique insight into a land more like a scene from Jurassic Park than from Crocodile Dundee.

About 95 million years ago, give or take a few hundred thousand years, a herd of about 150 small dinosaurs were grazing on the grasslands and drinking from a stream or lake some 120 km west of the present day site of Winton in Western Queensland.

The herd comprised Coelurosaurs and Ornithopods. These were not creatures of T-Rex dimensions. They were, in the case of the Coelurosaurs, no bigger than the average chicken and they lived on a diet of insects, frogs and lizards.

Help keep us up to date!

Please submit your events, with location and time to wintonheraldeditor@gmail.com

The WBTA hopes to have your event in our calendar at least two weeks prior to its occurrence to give those living out of town a chance to attend. In the past, many have commented that they did not know an event was on until it was too late - we are hoping to change that!

Editorial Submissions

The Winton Herald currently does not have a local journalist and as such we rely on community members to submit articles for publication. If you have recently been involved in running an event, please send a short article and a photo or two to the Editor at wintonheraldeditor@gmail.com for inclusion in the next available issue. Please note submission deadline of 8pm Monday for all articles and photos. Articles may be edited for length or consistency.

Nearby were a herd of herbivorous Ornithopods, known appropriately as Wintonopus, who could grow to the size of a modern day emu. They lived on ferns and low-lying palm trees.

Into this peaceful scene lumbered a single Theropod predator, a Tyrannosauropus. This was no match of equals. The average Coelurosaur stood about 20 cm high. The Tyrannosauropus was about 8-9 metres long and its head was about 3.5 metres above the ground.

Not surprisingly the Coelurosaurs and Ornithopods scattered. They stampeded in all directions across the muddy floodplain. They were running for their lives. The Tyrannosauropus, with its sharp pointed teeth and its huge knife-sharp claws, walked - although it could run when it needed to.

Did the Tyrannosauropus get to eat that day? We simply do not know. All that is left are the marks of its back feet – marks which are over half a metre long and characterised by three toes and a sharp claw – and some 3300 separate footprints from the 150 Coelurosaurs and Ornithopods as they rushed to escape from the predator.

At Lark Quarry, 110 km on a dirt road south-west of Winton, this remarkable story has been preserved in the sedimentary layers that are now known as the Winton Formation. This is not just another interesting fossil. This site is the only known record of a dinosaur stampede anywhere on the planet. It was first discovered in the 1960s by a local station manager, Glen Seymour, and in 1976-77 a team of palaeontologists moved in and over 60 tonnes of rock were excavated from the site. Today it is protected by a Conservation Building that keeps this unique site protected from the searing temperature, the rain and the dust which is such a natural part of modern-day western Queensland.

MY AUSTRALIAN ADVENTURE PT. VI – QUEENSLAND'S OUTBACK "HOLLYWOOD DOWN UNDER"

Article and photos from Glenda Fordham Blog

Although I travelled around Australia visiting all the big cities and coastal tourist havens, the small country town that really won my heart was WINTON, Queensland. I first became aware of Winton when it was the location for films and tv shows featuring my idol, Aaron Pedersen. The whole point of visiting with my travel companion and fellow Pedersen fan, Suzi, was to visit some of the town locations and recreate the scenes (eg: sitting on his bar stool at Tattersall's Hotel from Total

Control and paying tribute to our screen hero who has apparently now retired without formal notice. Suzi and I actually visited several known locations including Broome which was where his final Mystery Road series was shot (I'll post a Broome blog later)

Aaron is featured prominently in both the Waltzing Matilda Centre and the Royal Theatre which is the location for the annual Vision Splendid Outback Film Festival which takes place at the end of June.

Winton is also home to great opal shops and suppliers, in particular Joe and Natasha of The Opal Miner store who have appeared on the hit tv series, Outback Opal Hunters.

The residents and business owners in Winton are a wonderful bunch – friendly, welcoming and eager to chat about their town – I hope I can do them justice here. So first, let's chat about Aaron, director Ivan Sen and the impact Mystery Road has had on the town. In the large museum dedicated to legendary poet and journalist A.B.

“Banjo” Patterson and his world-famous poem/song Waltzing Matilda, there are numerous photos, movie posters and quotes on Mystery Road/Goldstone that stand out as soon as you walk into the first exhibition hall... The museum is a treasure trove of historical artifacts from the earliest settlers when sheep were the mainstay of daily life. Shearing equipment, old photos, as well as stockmen's gear, gold mining artifacts and ANZAC memorabilia – we spent nearly 2hrs going thru the halls and outside into barns...it kept going and going and going. But for any proud Australian, the song Waltzing Matilda is considered the unofficial anthem of the country and brings a tear to any eye, esp. those of us who have been away from home for so long.

Another great heritage site is the famous Royal Theatre which shows movies under the stars and also has a museum attached. Look what was playing the week Suzi and I were in town!! Visit their website for a great virtual tour: <https://royaltheatrewinton.com.au/>

What a great building to tour – the old box office, the dramatic entrance into the theatre itself with deck chair seating as well as cushioned chairs, with lots of displays around the projection equipment, then into the museum hall with vintage movie posters, cameras and equipment, as well as tributes to locally filmed movies....and lots of Aaron Pedersen pics!
